At 6.40 pm, 17 July 2019, a 100 people assembled in front of Anne Graham's moon sculpture, Mt Stromlo ACT, for a one-minute, 1,800 km, contemplative journey through our Solar neighbourhood riding on planet Earth. The Solar System Walk was as part of ANU celebrations to mark the 50th anniversary of the Moon landing. With lights in outstretched hands to illuminate the strident pose characteristic of Solar Walking, the participants undertook a thin spiral journey in relation to the Sun and, for one silent minute, contemplated the vast expanse of the Universe. The communal aesthetic experience conferred upon each individual walker Solurban Citizenship Status, and with it, came acknowledgement of the priceless real estate value of our planet.
